

Ending Civil Wars:

Combatants strategies and incentives to disarm

A talk by Natacha Lemasle

Why do combatants ever disarm? Combatants rely on their weapons for their living, for their safety, and it often also becomes a symbol of their social status and their identity. Comparing Liberia and Sierra Leone, through extensive fieldwork and interviews with combatants from all factions, I investigate their strategies and incentives to disarm.

COLORADO COLLEGE
1 8 7 4

Global Exchanges

CONVERSATIONS ON INTERNATIONAL TOPICS

December 17th in Palmer Hall, Room 17 from 3:30 to 5:00 pm.

Natacha Lemasle is a visiting faculty member from Northwestern University. She originally hails from Normandy, France. She is currently teaching Contemporary African Politics in the Political Science Department.